Which is to say Leviticus also prohibits eating shellfish, and if we're eating shellfish, then how can we really say we're taking Leviticus seriously? We are told in the New Creation that humans will not be married or be given into marriage to each. Perhaps the biggest pitfall would be what I already touched upon in question 1.

He had a real knack for design. Julie Mirlicourtois: So now, even though you wear skinny jeans and you get your cool hair cut from a tattooed gay hairdresser at a super hip salon that serves you whiskey while you wait. Best Selling in Nonfiction See all.

You said earlier you have an issue with the voices on both sides of the debate. J Mirlicourtois: And this is probably what struck me most about David's story, because in my mind, I always felt like celibacy was something that was imposed on people. Because the majority of her congregation may believe homosexuality is a sin, this also makes it hard for her being the leader.
