The guitar intro sounds great, the keyboard roll sounds great, and it's got a great feel to it - far more optimistic and fastpaced than ATC was even at the start. This is the song I keep coming back to over and over. All in all, a musically impressive album with enough experimentation on it to merit four stars.

It builds up, but there never really is a huge explosion that eventually leads to "Blind Faith", the production seems improved, perhaps because of the absence of the distorted guitar. There is, however, treatment with a variety of anti-psychotic medications "Pills, red, pink and blue".

Good lyrics from LaBrie, who doesn't write a whole lot for the band. CD 2 begins with "Overture" which also carries on too long.
