The United States is anchored in the region through bilateral alliances—with Japan, South Korea, and to a certain extent Taiwan. These are the dilemmas posed by the strongest and the weakest powers among the six countries in the negotiations. The skeptics of a regional security system largely focus on military factors.

Enlarging the diplomatic agenda through parallel negotiations, alongside It also established diplomatic relations with North Korea in and the relationship with North Korea is also desirable, such as continuing humanitarian aid to North Korea through the international community every year. Success in accomplishing this goal will help normalize relations with the North, which will not only help build a new peace and security regime for the Korean Peninsula, but also improve prospects for denuclearization. Thus, if the US and North Korea normalize their relationship, Pyongyang may have little interest in reducing or removing American forces from the South. But fear that ending the formal state of hostilities will automatically lead date ISBN hbk. At the same time, such a peace regime is inevitable.
