I'mhavingthesameproblem. If you find some ridiculously high number of hits, you may want to reconsider if you really want to download all of them, which is our next step. Before trying to use ClustalW from within Python, you should first try running the ClustalW tool yourself by hand at the command line, to familiarise yourself the other options. The latter allows you for example to search PubMed or download GenBank records from within a Python script.
