Broadening his argument to weak states in the Middle East Syria and Lebanon and Africa Zimbabwe and Somalia Markowitz shows how the distinct patterns of state failure in weak states with immobile capital can inform our understanding of regime change, ethnic violence, and security sector reform. In Uzbekistan, Islam Karimov maintains power through the brutal suppression of disaffected Muslims, who are nevertheless rising in numbers and influence.

Matveeva, A. Bregman's book, both challenging and bracing, demonstrates that these two books address important questions and puzzles concerning state-formation and conflict in Central Asia. Hurst and Co. Markowitz analyze the linkages between the drug trade and terrorism financing in Central Asia, finding that state security services shape the nexus of trafficking and terrorism. Campbell A. Hopkirk, P. Since the United States has been presenting itself in the region as "the greatest force of peace, progress, and human dignity the world has ever known," while American leadership was offered as the "global force for good."
